How often do you observe the world around you... people in the streets, people on TV, people just living their life's and hopefully enjoying it to the fullest?!

It used to say that people need bread and games and it seems to me sometimes the bread is preferably exchanged for cake. And games are becoming more and more intensive.

There are so many games these days. People play with money, emotions, they juggle with time and play with other people too. People play with words, passwords, swearwords.... It's pretty tough to name it all and arrange it all. Perhaps it's not even that needed after all, since those who play, know and those who don't, they will find out eventually, that we are all only going towards our own private miracle.

I keep on wondering what a perfect world I am a part of. Don't you just get inspired by the skylines of the cities, old people on park benches, old town streets and little coffee places?!... Don't you get hungry for a colorful life?!

"the only people for me are the mad ones, the ones who are mad to live, mad to talk, mad to be saved, desirous of everything at the same time, the ones that never yawn or say a commonplace thing, but burn, burn, burn..."

~ Jack Kerouac, On the Road, Part 1, Ch. 1

Some say we only have one life and that one life isn't always as spacious as we wanted it to be. Yet, sometimes I do want to believe that we can choose our lives just like we choose cereal for breakfast, tents for camping trips or colors for the living room. And I always, always want to believe that nothing is final. Nothing is final until you are dead. And even then, I am sure God negotiates!

And therefore, with new year in Mayan calendar which started on 26th of July, I would like to wish you to let go everything you were and become who you really are; leave the past for the past and only take the lessons out of the situations and experiences!

Life is indeed a wonderful private miracle.
