DEAR COLLEAGUES AND FRIENDS!

BRIT XV welcomes you to Northern Germany/Southern Denmark in hopefully beautiful spring weather. Thanks to all of you for traveling to Hamburg and Sønderborg.

With more than 150 registered participants from around the globe, the program of the BRIT 2016 Conference that you are holding in your hands is a testimony to the social, political and economic relevance of border studies and the growing importance of cities and metropolitan regions for the study of borders and borderlands.

Building on a tradition born more than 20 years ago in Berlin, the Border Regions in Transition (BRIT) conferences have now become leading forums for academics, policy-makers and practitioners interested in the functional interdependences, institutional relationships and tighter securitization which have critically changed the functions and significance of borders over the last decades.

We hope that the dialogue between our non-academic sponsors, workshop organizers, keynote speakers and participants will be fruitful and contribute to a better understanding of the role of cities and metropolitan regions in cross-border regional development.

As tradition requires, we have organized a field trip along the Danish-German border region. From Hamburg to Sønderborg, the field trip will explore the region's rich history as a place of diversity, of national conflict and cooperation and, more recently, of re-borderings. We hope that you will enjoy your stay with us and wish you all the best for a successful conference!

THEME OF THE CONFERENCE

The emergence of a much more integrated world has challenged some of our most fundamental assumptions on cities, states and borders. Now that states are actively promoting the development of competitive cross-border city-regions – as in the Øresund – the classical opposition between the cosmopolitan city and the national state no longer holds true.

Now that states have developed selective strategies that must simultaneously guarantee security while also enabling trade flows – as between the U.S. and Mexico – the much-discussed contradiction between the city as a space of flows and the state as a territorial container has evaporated.

And now that the external limits of territories and the internal delimitations within societies have been blurred, many cities appear at risk of being trapped by the securitization of the state.

In a world where national borders are simultaneously opened and closed, opportunities and constraints, negated and claimed, the theories developed by border studies appear to be more fragile than ever before.

If that were not enough, it appears that the current transformation in the forms and functions of borders affect cities differently according to their size, governance networks, and/or economic structure.

As state borders have become increasingly networked, diffused, and mobile, some city-regions, like Geneva or Luxembourg, have transformed from disadvantaged spaces due to their peripheral position to prosperous interfaces. Now considered as a resource, the presence of a border allows these city-regions to develop a growth model based on the comparative advantages of several states, and reinforces their international visibility in the global competition in which they are engaged.

Similar developments have been observed, for different reasons, in some parts of Africa, where border towns have mushroomed, and in Asia, where transfrontier metropolises such as Singapore or Hong Kong are highly integrated to the global economy.

Elsewhere in the world, the benefits of free-trade are often being more than outweighed by the re-bordering of national borders, which allows states to control movement and avert subversion. From the walls that are supposed to divide Israelis and Palestinians or the United States from Mexico, numerous ramparts, citadels, glacis walls and custom posts are experiencing a resurgence, dividing or isolating the city and recreating the fiction of a harmonious accord between territory and identity.

Many small border cities, as well, have struggled to transform their geographically peripheral situation into an advantage. Even in Europe, where it seems at first glance that the main challenge for cities is to minimize the remaining obstacles that could slow regional integration, numerous small urban centers still turn their back on the border.

BRIT CONFERENCES

Since 1994, the Border Regions in Transition (BRIT) Conferences are one of the leading international scientific conferences on interdisciplinary research on borders and borderlands. Meetings have been held in such diverse locations as Berlin (1994), San Diego (1999), Jerusalem (2005), and Fukuoka-Busan (2012). Following the conference organized between Arras, Lille and Mons in 2014, BRIT 2016 is the 15th edition of the conference.

The conference serves as a global forum for border scholars engaged in research dealing with cities, state and borders, irrespective of their disciplinary backgrounds, methodological approaches, or geographical scope. The conference brings together academics from different social sciences and economics. BRIT 2016 is open to contributions from all over the world.

The 2016 BRIT conference is also open to border professionals and practitioners involved in the daily management and control of borders, on cross-border cooperation, in border populations and minorities, and in border policies. A number of sessions will be devoted to those specialists and practitioners, in collaboration with our partners.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Professor Tony Payan

Rice University, USA

Tony Payan is the Françoise and Edward Djerejian Fellow for Mexico Studies and director of the Mexico Center at the Baker Institute at Rice University.

He is also an associate professor of political science at the University of Texas at El Paso, and a professor at the Universidad Autónoma de Ciudad Juárez in Mexico. He received his doctorate degree in international relations from Georgetown University.

Tony Payan's research focuses primarily on border studies, particularly the U.S.-Mexico border. His work theorizes on various topics regarding international borders, including border governance, immigration, border security, organized crime and the manifestation of U.S. foreign policy at its borders. He served as president of the Association for Borderlands Studies and is the America Editor of the Journal of Borderlands Studies.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Dr Beatrix Haselsberger

TU Wien, Austria and University of Cagliari, Italy

Beatrix Haselsberger is a Senior Researcher at the Department of Spatial Planning at the Vienna University of Technology (TU Wien) in Austria and a Visiting Professor at the Dipartimento di Ingegneria Civile, Ambientale e Architettura at the University of Cagliari in Italy.

Her main areas of research range from border studies (in theory and practice) as well as planning cultures and identities to European spatial planning and policy.

In her current work she focuses on the collective memory effect on cross-border cooperation practices. She seeks to unpack the many overlapping, contradictory and sometimes unconscious dynamics taking place in cross-border regions. She is the principal investigator of the research project 'COMPASS Collective Memory and Planning: Across Social Separation' funded by the Austrian Science Fund (FWF).

Beatrix Haselsberger is the author of several articles in a wide range of national and international journals. She has been the Editor-in-Chief of Regional Insights: A Review of Fresh Ideas, published by the Regional Studies Association as well as a Board Member of the Regional Studies Association and an Executive Committee Member of the Association of European Schools of Planning (AESOP).

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Professor Paul Nugent

Institute for Advanced Study, USA and University of Edinburgh, UK

Paul Nugent is Professor of Comparative African History and former Director of African Studies at the University of Edinburgh (2005-2014).

He holds a doctorate from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS) in London. Paul is the President of AEGIS, the Centre-based African Studies association in Europe, and as such is intimately involved in the European African Studies scene. Over 2015/16, Paul will be a Fellow at the Institute of Advanced Study in Princeton.

Paul Nugent's current research interests lie in the comparative history of West African borderlands. He is the initiator of the African Borderlands Research Network (ABORNE) which has been funded by the European Science Foundation for five years from 2009. Paul Nugent is the principal investigator of the African Governance and Space (AFRIGOS) project funded by the European Science Foundation.

In a more applied role, Paul has served as a resource person for the African Union Border Programme (AUBP). Paul is currently the co-editor of the Journal of Modern African Studies.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Professor Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly

University of Victoria, Canada

Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly is a Professor of Political Science at the University of Victoria (UVic), specializing in comparative border and urban politics.

Prior to his appointment at UVic, Emmanuel Brunet-Jailly was an Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Western Ontario from 1999-2000, and Assistant Director of the Nanovic Institute for European Studies at the University of Notre Dame from 2000-2001.

Professor Brunet-Jailly is Jean Monnet Chair in European Urban and Border Region Policy, Director of the European Union Centre for Excellence. He is Chief Editor of the Journal of Borderlands Studies and Principal Investigator of the Borders in Globalization (BIG) Project.

KEYNOTE SPEAKERS

Associate Professor Michaela Trippl

Lund University, Sweden

Michaela Trippl is an Associate Professor in Economic Geography at the Department of Human Geography at Lund University.

She received her PhD from the Vienna University of Economics and Business (WU) (Austria) in 2004.

Before joining Lund University in 2012, Michaela has been an Associate Professor at the Institute for Regional Development and Environment at WU.

Her research and teaching have been dedicated to fields in economic geography, innovation studies and regional science with a focus on cross-border regional innovation systems, long-term regional structural change, labor mobility and regional development, spatial patterns and institutional foundations of the knowledge economy and regional innovation policies. She is the Co-Editor of Papers in Regional Science.

PLACES TO EAT AND EXPLORE

Hamburg offers endless choices of various cuisines from across the globe. The different districts of Hamburg each have their own charm. The conference venue is located in the “Hafen City”, a docklands’ urban development project with a few good restaurants, close to Speicherstadt, the largest warehouse district in the world. Downtown, the Neustadt is more vivid for shopping and eating than the office-dominated Altstadt.

If you walk downtown from the conference venue, pass by Deichstraße, the only alley left giving an impression of historic, pre-industrial Hamburg. Jungfernstieg on the Alster is for fashionable shopping. A cruise on the Alster lake (from Jungfernstieg) is a relaxing way to experience Hamburg as a green metropolis. To see the harbour, take a boat ride on harbor ferry 62 from Landungsbrücken to Finkenwerder. It’s included in the city’s mass transit system and thus cheaper than the organized harbour tours. The city also offers a large variety of cultural activities at reasonable prices.

City Hall, where the reception on 17 May will be held, is located Downtown, at a walking distance from the train station and the conference venue (U-Bahn station Rathaus or U- and S-Bahn Station Jungfernstieg).

Altona - Altona was an independent city until 1937, and under Danish administration until 1864. It’s no coincidence that Hamburg’s red light district, St. Pauli, is located in the former Norman’s land between Hamburg and Altona. Today, Altona is known for its multi-cultural scene and its numerous bars, pubs, and restaurants. Altona's closeness to the Elbe River makes it the ideal location for the Hamburg Fish Market, which takes place every Sunday morning. Altona is also known for its beer. The Holsten Brewery, which has been brewing beer since 1879, is located in northern Altona.

Bergedorf - Bergedorf, 20 min. from downtown by S-Bahn, is still somehow a city of its own. To the south lie the "Vier- und Marschlande", "the" agricultural district of Hamburg. It's characterized by many traditional German timbered houses (Fachwerkhäusern) and historic churches and buildings, as well as the Bergedorf Castle. If you have time, you can take a 3 h river cruise to Bergedorf from Jungfernstieg (or vice versa), <http://www.alstertouristik.de/klassiker/vierlandefahrt.html>.

Hamburg Mitte - Altstadt, Neustadt, HafenCity, Speicherstadt and the Harbour all belong to Hamburg Mitte district. Known as the "Heart of the City," Hamburg Mitte is a favorite destination for tourists. It is filled with site-seeing opportunities, and offers its inhabitants and visitors plenty of places to shop, eat, and drink.

Eimsbüttel and Eppendorf - Filled with Wilhelminian architecture and plenty of parks, Eimsbüttel is a favorite of students and young families. It is known for its shopping and its numerous cafes, restaurants, and bars. Just across, Eppendorf is the most fashionable district of Hamburg. The "Isemarkt" under the metro-viaduct between Hoheluftbrücke and Eppendorfer Baum stations (U 3) is the city's best market for fresh food and exotic specialties (Tuesday and Friday, 8.30-14 h).
