

PhD defense

Charlotte Epple

November 4, 13:00, Room O99

The Faculty of Humanities has accepted the PhD thesis:

Binding Fragments in the Herlufsholm Collection. Origins, Reuse and Books in Motion

The project deals with fragments of medieval manuscripts and early printed books reused as bookbinding material in the old library of Herlufsholm Skole, illuminating the origins and object biographies of books with binding fragments in the Nordic and European context. Treating the largely still in situ fragments as relational objects characterised by both their former whole and their new material function, I analyse the fragments as products of the mobility of books, materials, and readers in the early modern period.

After the defense, the department will host a reception in The Restaurant. Everyone is welcome.

Kind regards,

Per Krogh Hansen, Head of Department
