

Urban Resilience Intensive Training

2023

20 - 28 June
Copenhagen

CALL FOR PARTICIPATION

International Urban Resilience Academy

The Urban Resilience Intensive Training (URIT) 2023 brings together policymakers, practitioners and researchers. URIT aims at expanding the participants' knowledge on policies, tools, strategic and action planning for resilient urban transition, integrating climate mitigation and adaptation, for a just and green transition.

URIT brings together transdisciplinary knowledge and perspectives on urban resilience from science, policy, and practice. URIT builds skills and competencies to tackle global challenges in the Global South and North. Through a system thinking approach, the program focuses specifically on core topics such as climate change and resilience analysis, future scenarios, strategic and action planning; as well as cross-cutting topics such as ecosystem services, multi-level governance, nature-based solutions, disaster risk reduction and participation. The highly interactive programme includes keynotes from international speakers, peer-to-peer sessions among participants, field visits to best practices in Copenhagen and group work on specific cities worldwide.
