

“Do Whales Judge Us? Interspecies History and Ethics”

1. September 14.00-15.00

Online Zoom:

<https://syddanskuni.zoom.us/j/61406237566>

Bathsheba Demuth, PhD
Assistant Professor of History &
Environment and Society
Brown University

I am an environmental historian, specializing in the lands and seas of the Russian and North American Arctic. My interest in northern environments and cultures began when I was 18 and moved to the village of Old Crow in the Yukon. For over two years, I mushed huskies, hunted caribou, fished for salmon, tracked bears, and otherwise learned to survive in the taiga and tundra. In the years since, I have visited Arctic communities across Eurasia and North America. From the archive to the dog sled, I am interested in how the histories of people, ideas, places, and non-human species intersect. My writing on these subjects has appeared in publications from The American Historical Review to The New Yorker.