Introduction to the teaching

Dear student.

As we travel more and more - on holidays as well as to start 'a new life' in another country - we are more frequently met with cultures that are different from the one we grew up in. In order to thrive and experience as much as possible without offending others or ending up in unfortunate situations, it is important for us to possess intercultural competences.

But how do we approach it? Isn't it just the culture that we grew up in that is best, and why should I adapt to other people's cultures? This is something we are to talk about and explore together.

Preparation (corresponding to max. 15 minutes preparation time)

Before we meet, I would like to ask you to reflect on when you have experienced a culture that is different from the one you grew up in.

Have you been on a holiday, lived abroad for a period, or had an exchange student living at home with your parents?
